4. The California Legislature recently approved an immigration-related bill, known as the Trust Act and sent it to Governor Brown for his signature. The bill bars prisons and jails from honoring most requests by immigration authorities to hold illegal immigrants who have been charged with or convicted of crimes. In cases where the illegal immigrant already has been convicted of a violent crime or felony, the bill grants prisons and jails the option of either releasing the illegal immigrant or honoring the request by immigration authorities to hold him. Subsets have a larger margin of error than the whole data set. As a rule we do not rely on the validity of very small subsets of the data, especially sets smaller than 50-75 respondents. At that size subset we can make generalizations, but in these cases the data is more qualitative than quantitative

5. Supporters of the Trust Act argue that the bill would enhance public safety because immigrants living in California will feel more comfortable cooperating with police. Opponents of the Trust Act argue that the bill would endanger public safety because it would result in criminals being returned to the community instead of being removed from the country. Which of these arguments do you find more persuasive?
